SHRULE & MOYNE CEMETERY MASSES: Unfortunately, this year, it was not possible to have the cemetery Masses at the graveyards due to the weather and were held in the churches respectively. Thanks to all involved - readers, musicians, planners and organizers and especially to all those who were able to attend. Hopefully, the liturgies brought people some comfort and consolation. Apologies if there was confusion as result of the change in location. May the souls of the faithful departed rest in peace. Amen. Let us pray for them, and may they pray for us.

LOOKING THROUGH THE RAIN

The playground is empty
 All the children have gone home.
 Rain is misting through the park.
 An old man sits on the bench
 Staring at the silent swings and slides
 He doesn't see them.
 He is looking at seventy years ago.
 It isn't raining there.

A LITTLE BIT OF HUMOUR:

- Strange new trend at the office. People are putting names on food in the company fridge. Today I had a tuna sandwich named Linda.
- This morning my son said his ear hurt and I said on the inside or the outside, so he walks out the front door, comes back in and says both. Moments like this got me wondering if I'm saving too much for college.
- Remember those days when people used to write diaries and got mad when someone read them... Now they put everything on facebook and get annoyed when people don't read them...

MY FAVOURITE QUOTE OF THE MONTH:

You don't have to know much when you come to Christ, you don't have to know the whole Gospel or you don't have to know the Bible. You come just like you are. The thief on the cross didn't know very much but he turned to Jesus while he was dying and said: Lord, remember me when you come into your kingdom, just remember me". He had no time to join a church, he had no time to be baptised, he had no time for anything. He just said Lord, remember me and that's all that was needed. Because Jesus said today, you will be with me in paradise. Where you worship God is not the most important thing. It's how you worship God that is important. You worship him in prayer, in going to Mass and the reading of the bible and taking part in the Eucharist.

THE PATTERN OF IRISH HOSPITALITY that was once spontaneous and instinctive is now largely prearranged. Unscheduled visits are not much welcomed anymore and sometimes they are greatly resented (especially if you happen to drop in during your favourite TV programme!). Pressures and developments in modern life are insulating us from family, neighbours and friends.

A pause for a chat, time spent bringing children to the park to run around and play, a visit to the hospital, the rediscovery of the tea pot and the picnic, gathering a few neighbours for a small barbecue in the back garden, some contribution to community life - aren't these things of some importance?

In this so called modern world, we need to broaden our concept of hospitality. At times it means doing difficult things. It means putting ourselves out a bit. It can mean welcoming, the refugee, the asylum seeker, the awkward relative, in our midst. Hospitality does not just involve cups of tea. It often is about buckets and buckets of tolerance, understanding and patience. Fr. Gerry Jennings devoted to the Precious Blood of Jesus. July, month of haymaking, month of holidaymaking, highlight of summer. In July, be with us, O Lord. The Pope's intention for this month: We pray for the elderly who represent the roots and memory of a people; may their experience and wisdom help young people to look towards the future with hope and responsibility. During the Summer, communities assemble to celebrate various events, religious, cultural and athletic. May they be always safe.

JULY IS THE MONTH

God Our Father, help us to be part of a community. May we respect God, ourselves, others and the environment and set up just and fair relationships wherever we may be. Amen.

The Happiest people don't have the best of everything, they just make the best of everything.

SHRULE CHURCH RESTORATION & RENOVATION:

The second phase of restoration and renovation is now underway with the church in Shrule. The aim of the project is to ensure that church in Shrule continues to be a place of worship and prayer, now and well into the future. In this phase, the plan is to reroof the church, complete the drainage works with new eaves and downpipes and paint the exterior of the church. This phase has been delayed owing to the age and necessary works to be done, along with the impact of Covid19 pandemic. I would like to thank both Shrule Church Renovation Committee as well the parish Finance committee for the ongoing support and commitment to this project. This work is possible because of your continuing support. Progress pictures will be posted in the church notice board as well as posted on Shrule Parish website and Facebook.

THANK YOU PARISH CHOIRS & MUSICIANS:

As the summer starts, you will notice that the parish musicians and choirs will be taking a well-deserved break. Thank you to everyone involved for giving your time and talent; music adds so much to the liturgy. The plan is to have the full choirs back in mid to late September in both churches, so until then – thank you and enjoy a well-deserved break.

- "Karl Marx wasn't a Marxist all the time. He got drunk in the Tottenham Court Rd." -Michael Foot.
- "Television is far more interesting than people. If it were not, we should have people standing in the corners of our rooms." – Alan Coren.

JUST A THOUGHT - WHEN SOMEONE DIES

When someone dies, the first thing to do is nothing. Don't run out and call the nurse. Don't pick up the phone. Take a deep breath and be present to the magnitude of the moment.

There's a grace to being at the bedside of someone you love as they make their transition out of this world. At the moment they take their last breath, there's an incredible sacredness in the space. The veil between the worlds opens.

We're so unprepared and untrained in how to deal with death that sometimes a kind of panic response kicks in. "They're dead!"

We knew they were going to die, so their being dead is not a surprise. It's not a problem to be solved. It's very sad, but it's not cause to panic.

If anything, their death is cause to take a deep breath, to stop, and be really present to what's happening. If you're at home, maybe put on the kettle and make a cup of tea.

Sit at the bedside and just be present to the experience in the room. What's happening for you? What might be happening for them? What other presences (God) is here that might be supporting them on their way? Tune into all the beauty and magic.

Pausing gives your soul a chance to adjust, because no matter how prepared we are, a death is still a shock. If we kick right into "do" mode, and call 911, or call the hospice, we never get a chance to absorb the enormity of the event.

Give yourself five minutes or 10 minutes, or 15 minutes just to be. You'll never get that time back again if you don't take it now.

After that, do the smallest thing you can. Call the one person who needs to be called. Engage whatever systems need to be engaged, but engage them at the very most minimal level. Move really, really, really, slowly, because this is a period where it's easy for body and soul to get separated.

Our bodies can gallop forwards, but sometimes our souls haven't caught up. If you have an opportunity to be quiet and be present, take it. Accept and acclimatize and adjust to what's happening. Then, as the train starts rolling, and all the things that happen after a death kick in, you'll be better prepared.

You won't get a chance to catch your breath later on. You need to do it now.

Being present in the moments after death is an incredible gift to yourself, it's a gift to the people you're with, and it's a gift to the person who's just died. They're just a hair's breath away. They're just starting their new journey in the world without a body. If you keep a calm space around their body, and in the room, they're launched in a more beautiful way. It's a service to both sides of the veil.

Sarah Kerr

There's no storm that God won't carry you through. No bridge that God won't help you cross. No battle that God won't help you win. No heartache that God won't help you let go of. He is so much bigger than anything you will face today.

Leave everything in His hands and embrace this day confidently knowing that He will take care of you.

MAISIE KELLEGHAN RIP

A poem I have not shared before. A poem about the very lovely Maisie Kelleghan R.I.P. - Maisie was so familiar to me in my younger years, kind of like distant family - through my second family, the Kelleghan's. Maisie always seemed happy to me, and I remember being taken aback to learn of the grief and sadness she had endured in her life. She lost her husband when her children were very young and she suffered every parent's worst nightmare, when her beautiful daughter died tragically.

Maisie was someone who knew how to keep the best side outwards, despite what burdens she inevitably was shouldering. The most thing I remember about Maisie was her laugh - you simply couldn't ignore it. It was contagious. I wrote this the night the lovely Maisie was buried and I share it with her family's permission.

Maisie

The winter dew falls softly on the grasslands of Carramore,
While the early evening fog clings to the ground lamenting one of life's great characters.
The night sky creeps in and comes alive with a hundred thousand welcoming stars for the mammy and wife who has long since carried a burden too heavy for most.
Now the angels have melted the grief from her heart while Heaven welcomes it's much loved and loyal servant home.

Tonight the hearth of Paradise, is steeped in love and laughter and tea and cake, and everyone who can put talk down a bottle!

Maisie settles in amongst the friends and family who have come for the long awaited reunion...and she lets peace fill her heart as she looks back on a life well lived.

EIGHTIES & NINETIES DALGAN,

A wild place... truth be told.
We spoke our minds,
We fought our corners,
We learnt to be brazen and bold!
Sweetly digging our thumb nails into the stem of a daisy,
Or having a full blown scrap on the lawn,
Anything could happen on the Dalgan Road,
Possé life was strong!
We gathered clothes-pegs and blankets,
And made hideouts amongst the trees,
We carved footholds in the bark with pin-knives,
And played "shop" with the fallen leaves!
We debated if the strawberries were really worth it...
As we weighed up the electric fence!
The short straw... was really the short straw,
It had little to do with common sense!
We spent a summer building a raft,
So we could catch pike on Dooley's lake,
We just forgot that we needed a paddle...
And that our raft, didn't have a brake!
Then one of us got access to a Honda,
Which one of us we could not say,
The chances are, if that bike could talk Ted,
It would probably have plenty to say!
Now we stand here in this graveyard,
Familiar faces gathered once again,
We made the crack where we found it John,
And we'll always have memory lane.

- Geraldine Monaghan 2022 - Fondly remembering John Donnellan
