NATURE MATTERS

A botanist friend, John Freehan, describes his first meeting with the bee orchid at the age of thirteen as 'heart-stopping', as a moment of revelation. Fifty years later, I can sense what he meant.

Our footprint grows heavier upon the earth. Maybe wild flowers can heal us if we let them. The Master understood as much when he said, 'attend to them' for in their beauty is revealed something of the Father's love. In their presence we are invited to be still.
