

Lahardane Trails

Best Community Tourist Project in Mayo 2012
National Pride of Place Award 2012

Lahardane, Ireland's Titanic Village, takes its name from "Leath-Ardán", meaning gentle slope, or half a height. Read our full Titanic story at www.mayo-titanic.com. Our picturesque village and Addergoole Parish are steeped in local history. Take a walk down Lahardane village. Don't miss:

- Conroy Memorial to 1798 beside this memorial park and route of Humbert Trail
- St Patrick's Church in Lahardane with its Titanic memorial, and one of only two Titanic themed stained glass windows in churches worldwide
- Harry Clarke window of Madonna and Child
- External free standing church bell donated by Mícheál O'Tiomnaidhe, famous Gaelic scholar, Irish writer and folklore collector

These walking trails show the history and splendour of Addergoole Parish, Nephin Mountain, Lough Conn, old homesteads and the environs.

The Addergoole Titanic Trails and this information board were developed by the Addergoole Titanic Society, local community with the help of Mayo County Council and the local Rural Social Scheme. The Western People kindly gave permission to use the layout for the Addergoole Fourteen story. Michael Coleman of Whitethorn Studio Lahardane gave permission to use his painting of the Addergoole Fourteen waiting at Queenstown to board RMS Titanic on 11th April 1912.
